Hello both,

I attach the latest version of the tutorial handout. The latest version of webAKT itself can be found at <http://dev.webakt.org/msc3/webakt.html>. Note the change from msc2 to msc3 - the version used last year (msc2) has not been changed and is still available. The handout is a Word document, so feel free to make changes to it, and perhaps add some exercises where I have a blank Question bit.

A couple of points:

- I have kept the anonymised names as random first names, as last year. I know that you wanted them changed to something like a simple number, but I thought that it looks a bit more realistic if it is real names, so long as its made clear that they are totally fictitious. I can change if you really want me to.
- Tim, you had problems with some of the layout on your Mac for last year's version (though oddly this only seemed to surface quite recently). Please test on your Mac and let me know if it is now OK.
- You or your students may get a warning that the page is "Not secure". This should not be an issue from the security point of view,, assuming you trust me, but I will look into how to get an "SSL certificate" before the class practical.
- I have specified that the student should "refresh the browser" at the start of each of the 10 sections. This is not at all necessary, but is just to save them getting a cluttered screen and/or having to close panels down. You could maybe mention that during the session.

If you both could run through the tutorial this week, and let me know any minor or major issues, that would be great, thanks.

Best wishes,
Robert

Subject: webAKT for MSc class, Feb 2023

Hello Tim,

I will shortly be sending you a link for the current version of webAKT, and the corresponding tutorial handout. Most of the changes to wekAKT since last time relate to creating and editing knowledge bases, but - as was the case last year - these are not covered in the tutorial. There has also been quite a lot of code restructuring under the covers. The main visible changes relate to listboxes and collapsible-tree displays for hierarchies, both of which allow extra information for each record to be displayed, as well as some changes to the user interface for displaying lists of things (statements, sources, etc) and details for individual instances of these.

I will be relatively free from now till Thurs 9th Feb, with less time after that. It would therefore be good if you, Eefke, and maybe a couple of students/colleagues could run through the tutorial fairly soon, and let me know of any issues, and suggestions for changes. Does that sound OK?

Cheers,
Robert
